Resumo: O objetivo deste estudo foi caracterizar o perfil epidemiológico do idoso que busca consulta médica em Unidade de Pronto Atendimento. A amostra foi composta por 2273 pacientes, com idade acima de 60 anos atendidos em São José dos Campos, São Paulo, durante o ano de 2013. Os pacientes foram divididos em dez grupos de acordo com o diagnóstico, baseado na CID-10. As mulheres representaram a maioria dos pacientes (59%). Do total de idosos, cerca de 24% foram diagnosticados como grupo X (doenças variadas e não graves), demonstrando que um quarto da amostra foi de pacientes não urgentes, os quais poderiam ter sido consultados em outros serviços de saúde, ao invés do Pronto Atendimento. O conhecimento sobre o idoso que busca o serviço de urgência é fundamental para a orientação desse usuário ao local mais adequado para o tratamento. Com o aumento da expectativa de vida, é imprescindível a implementação de políticas públicas direcionadas ao idoso. O cuidado com esse paciente é incipiente, pois os serviços de saúde ainda necessitam ser estruturados de acordo com as necessidades específicas desse público.

Palavras-chave: idoso; medicina de emergência; CID.

Abstract: The aim of this study was to characterize the profile of the elderly seeking medical consultation in an Emergency Unit. The sample comprised 2273 subjects over 60 years old, who were attended in São José dos Campos, São Paulo, during the year 2013. The patients were divided into ten groups according to the diagnosis based on ICD-10. Women accounted for the majority of patients (59%). About 24% was diagnosed as X group (varied and non-serious diseases), showing that a quarter of the sample was non-urgent patients, which could have been attended at other health facilities, rather than the Emergency Unit. Knowledge about the elderly who seeks emergency service is critical to guide them to the most appropriate place for treatment. With the increase in life expectancy, it is essential to implement public policies directed at the elderly. The care of this patient is incipient, as health services still need to be structured according to the specific needs of this public.

Keywords: elderly; emergency medicine; ICD.
